MY SURGERY DISCOVERY

'It can give you wrinkles'

Maureen Wood, 46, had a breast enlargement and nose job as well as work done on her face and teeth

'I wanted a radical body overhaul, so I spent £15,000 and that's exactly what I got. I had my breasts increased from a 32AA to a 32D, my pointy nose softened, my weak chin made stronger and veneers put on my teeth. I loved the new me but, after all that work, I never expected to be back in the surgeon's office just six months later. The reason? I was so delighted with my new improved body that unbeknown to me, I was beaming like a Cheshire cat – something I hadn't been doing for years because I'd hated my looks. According to my surgeon, all that smiling had caused lines to appear between my nose and mouth and little crinkles in the corner of my eyes. Thankfully, a course of Botox has zapped those now, but I may need more injections in the future – if I continue to be this pleased, it may well be necessary.'
